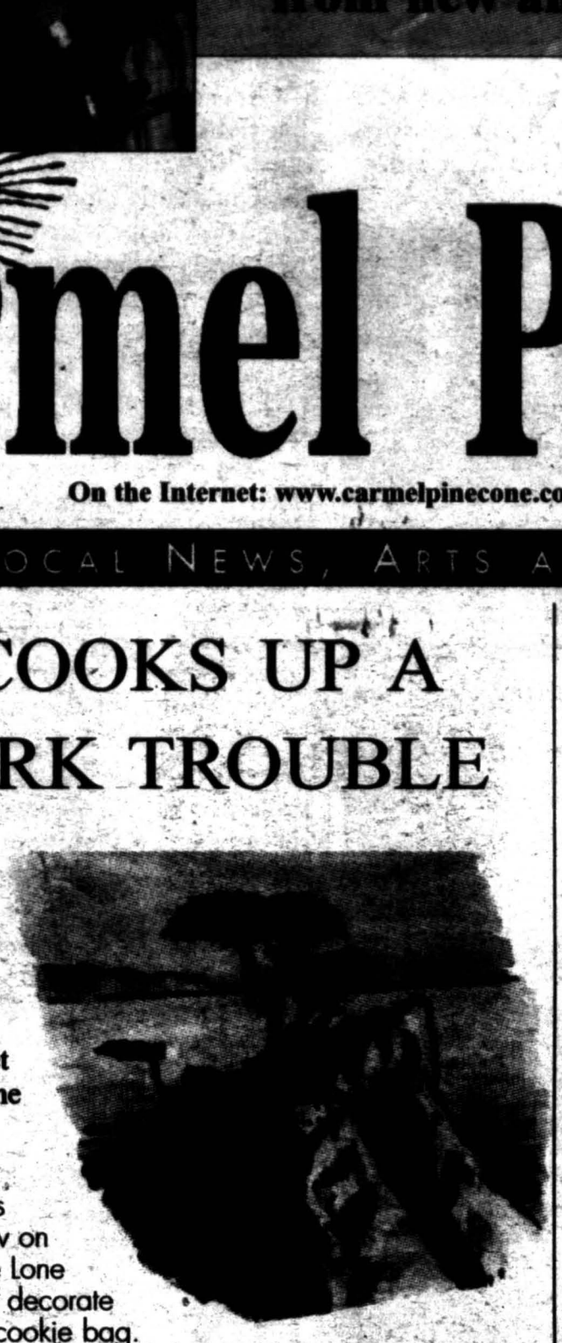
PEPPERIDGE FARM COOKS UP A BATCH OF TRADEMARK TROUBLE

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS and PAUL MILLER

CARMEL HAS been honored with its own chewy cookie — joining Milano, Tahoe and Sedona as cities after which a Pepperidge Farm sweet is named.

But the launch of the new cookie this month could get Pepperidge Farm in trouble with the Pebble Beach Company. The back of the "Carmel Chocolate Chunk Soft Baked" cookie bag is decorated with a lovely color drawing of the Lone Cypress, which the P.B. Co. aggressively defends as its trademark.



Pepperidge Farm handed its lawyers something to chew on when it chose the Lone Cypress (right) to decorate its new Carmel cookie bag.

Pepperidge Farm, a division of the food giant Campbell's, did not get the P.B. Co.'s permission to use its trademark on the cookie bags.

According to a local trademark expert, Bob Payne of the Monterey law firm LaRiviere, Grubman & Payne, the P.B. Co. could challenge the Pepperidge Farm use of the Long Cypress likeness as a case of "trademark dilution."

"Whether somebody is selling soap or cookies or a golf course, Pebble Beach could say they're diluting the effectiveness of Pebble Beach's 'famous trademark'," Payne said.

A sampling of the chunky cookies was distributed at Carmel City Hall on election night April 9 by former Pepperidge Farm vice president of sales Peter H. Trivers,

Burglars prey on Carmel homes

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A GROWING number of burglaries has police searching for suspects and cautioning local residents to keep their eyes and ears open for anything and anyone out of the ordinary.

In addition to a dozen residential burglaries and as many vehicle burglaries inside city limits since January, the unincorporated area around Carmel has suffered seven vehicle burglaries, 15 residential burglaries and seven burglaries at businesses during the same period, according to Carmel P.D. and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

CPD Detective Sgt. Terry Chandler said many of the crimes may have been committed by the same suspects, and that the two agencies compare notes regularly on incidents in their jurisdictions.

Thieves most recently struck Carmel-by-the-Sea the evening of April 23 at the Dolores Street home of Brad and Hallie Mitchell Dow while the couple was out, according to Chandler. After arriving home and noticing things amiss — including lights on in the bedroom, an unlocked front door and a gate ajar — the Dows found the bedroom in disarray and called police. Although they have an alarm, the system was not armed.

"They smashed a side window and crawled through broken glass," Chandler said. "I don't know how they did it without getting cut."

The thieves stole $1,000 worth of costume jewelry, dropping pieces as they fled, according to Chandler.

Neighbors neither saw nor heard anything, he said.

That incident came on the heels of a burglary at Carl and Jane Panattoni's beachfront residence the weekend of April 13, when the perpetrators walked off with two TVs and nine speakers valued at more than $30,000, according to Chandler.

"Only the inside locking mechanisms were working on the doors, so you could stick a screwdriver in there and pop the thing open," he said, because the home is still under construction. "But it's not too easy to get into this place because they're rebuilding the bridge in front, so how would someone carry off that much equipment? There's no way someone's going to do it

OCEAN AVENUE TO CASH IN ON CRUISE SHIPS

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Business Association wants to sink the sluggish economy with an ambitious plan to bring cruise passengers stepping off ships at Monterey into Carmel for a day of shopping.

The CBA's "shopping shuttle" will debut May 7 when the first of three cruise ships scheduled for 2002, the Star Princess, will dock at Monterey Bay. Vacationers coming ashore from The Princess Cruise Line ship — which has a 2,800 passenger capacity — will be greeted by CBA representatives at Custom House Plaza who can direct them to the CBA shuttles.

The organization will run three shuttle buses from 9:15 a.m. to 5 p.m., with stops at the wharf, Carmel Plaza, the Crossroads Shopping Village and The Barnyard every 15 to 20 minutes.

The CBA plans to sponsor shopping shuttles for each cruise ship coming into Monterey Bay this year. Two others are scheduled to dock in September and October.

"We recognize that Monterey will never become a highly visited port," said Brenda Roncarati, executive director of the CBA. "We don't foresee that it's going to turn into Catalina, but we would love to see six ships a year."

Beach stairway first casualty of town's recession

By TAMARA GRIPPI

SOBERED BY the prospect that Carmel could face revenue losses of several hundred thousand dollars this year, the Carmel City Council last week abandoned a project long in the works — replacement of the wooden beach stairway at 12th Avenue with permanent concrete steps.

Voting 3-2, with Barbara Livingston and Dick Ely dissenting, the council decided it was not a good time to spend almost $200,000 of city money on a project that is not urgent.

In its first major decision since the election, the majority of the council agreed to return a $165,000 grant to the California Coastal Conservancy that would have partially funded the $340,000 project.

"I felt that spending close to $200,000 is not a wise move to make, at least this month, without knowing where we will stand in May," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud. The city receives its hostelry tax revenues then.

McCloud and councilmembers Paula Hazdovac and Gerard Rose — who voted last month to support the stairway project in the hopes they could reduce the cost to $314,000 — explained that the dismal budget news changed their minds.

JUDGE SILVER TO RETIRE AFTER QUARTER CENTURY ON THE BENCH

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MONTEREY COUNTY Superior Court Judge Richard Silver — who cut his legal teeth on high-profile cases involving the Black Panthers and prison reform, and played a key role in allowing hippies to congregate in Devendorf Park — will retire in June after 25 years on the bench.

Silver, 60, said he decided to quit after waking up one morning with the thought that he'd spent almost half his life as a judge. When Gov. Jerry Brown appointed him in 1977, Silver was only 35 — the state's youngest Superior Court judge.

And though he "loved every second" of his judicial career, he said it's time to do something else: hiking, painting, perhaps playing a little bluegrass, in addition to pursuing a skill for which he has become widely known — settling disputes. He expects to open a private practice specializing in resolving cases out of court.

"One thing I've learned in this business of civil cases is that in 98 percent of them, the best solution is one all the parties agree to," he said. "There are a certain number that need to go to trial; they carry matters of great community interest. But generally, litigation is costly monetarily and emotionally."

In fact, Silver is so adept at resolving cases that he has actually affected the whole court system, according to Sara George, his court reporter for the past 15 years.

"He is such a hard worker that it will be hard to pick up the slack," she said. "He's great at settling cases, which eases the load on the court system, too."

Finding ways to improve the courts has been a goal of Silver's since he took the bench a quarter century ago, he said.

"Seeing government work — that was so important to me, coming back from Vietnam," said Silver, who served in the Army there from 1967-68 and was awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service in a combat zone.

Soon after the Tet Offensive, which cost the lives of thousands of Americans as the Vietcong captured a wide swath of territory, Silver returned home with a mind-set that "there has to be a better way to solve problems than war."

With an undergraduate degree from UC Berkeley and a law degree from Boalt School of Law, the Oakland-born Silver moved to Monterey County to work with Francis Heisler in the antiwar movement on behalf of conscientious objectors.

In what Silver said became a cause celebre in the early '70s, he defended three black inmates charged with killing a Soledad Prison guard in a case that involved Angela Davis and the Black Panthers.

Judge Richard Silver

After one of the three defendants was killed in San Quentin, the trial for the remaining two took place in the first U.S. courtroom ever to be protected by bullet-proof glass, Silver recalled.

"That was more security than I had ever seen before," he said. "A jury of 12 white people found them not guilty."

In 1968 he challenged the City of Carmel when it tried to keep hippies out of Devendorf Park by passing a law against sitting on the grass. It was a battle that went all the way to the State Supreme Court, which sided with Silver and threw out the law.

Activist moves to the bench

With his elevation to the bench, Silver was confronted with a completely different set of challenges than those he faced as a

Carmel Regional Fire & Ambulance takes big hit from Medicare

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL AMBULANCE officials are bracing for the impact of a new federal ruling barring ambulance providers from billing Medicare patients for the actual cost of an ambulance ride. Effective April 1, the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance service must settle for the amount Medicare reimburses — which is substantially below the actual cost of the service, according to CRFA officials.

The new regulation will likely result in a major financial hit for CRFA, though Sidney Reade, the fire chief for both Carmel and Carmel Valley, is still evaluating the potential losses.

The ruling, put in place by the federal Health Care Financing Administration, stipulates that ambulance providers can only bill for the amount that Medicare — and whatever supplemental insurance patients may by carrying — will reimburse.

CRFA cannot bill Medicare patients for the balance of the bill. In California, the reform translates to a "drastic decrease in the amount of reimbursement for ambulance service," Reade said.

To compound matters for ambulance providers, the regulation also decreases the amount of money Medicare is willing to reimburse the ambulance service — and that amount will continue to drop over the next few years.

A trip from downtown Carmel to CHOMP by ambulance is billed by CRFA at about $710. Medicare now pays about 65 percent of that.

More than half of CRFA's current clients are Medicare customers. Until now, CRFA — a joint powers agreement between the City of Carmel and the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District — has billed its Carmel-by-the-Sea clients for ambulance transportation at the same rate charged by private ambulance services.

CRFA keeps ambulances staffed 24 hours a day at Carmel Fire Station, Mid Valley Fire Station and the Carmel Valley Village Fire Station. In addition, CRFA houses spare ambulances in Carmel and at Mid Valley.

Each year, Carmel-by-the-Sea and the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District subsidize the CRFA's shortfall.

The city's annual payment to CRFA has increased steadily since Carmel entered the joint powers agreement five years ago at a cost of $100,000 a year, according to assistant city administrator Greg D'Ambrosio.

For 2001/2002, the city has budgeted $180,000 for CRFA, based on the service estimates.

It remains to be seen whether Carmel will end up picking up a bigger tab for the remaining months of this fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Carmel City Councilman Gerard Rose, who serves as the city's representative with CRFA, said the agency will be looking at all its options, including raising its rates and charging the jurisdictions more.

In addition to the loss of Medicare funding, Reade is also concerned about how other insurance companies are going to react to the changes.

"Are they going to follow suit?" she asked.

Reade said she's in the midst of reviewing CRFA's records to get a better idea how much shortfall is facing the agency.

"We'll look at the last five years and see what [this ruling] would have done and then come up with an average," she said. "Our clientele is not just residents, but also visitors, and we need to take a broad picture to not overstate or understate our loss."

Reade emphasized that while the new regulations may result in a loss of funding for CRFA, they won't change the level of service that agency provides.

Rose agreed. "The city's commitment to the current level of ambulance service is unwavering," he said. "It's my belief and intention that we can and will find revenue sources to overcome any deficit."

This year, the city will have to take a hard look at its overall budget — both in terms of revenues and expenditures, Rose said. "But ambulance service is not something I want to tinker with."

Man found on Robinson Canyon determined to be suicide victim

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A MAN discovered lying next to his truck by Carmel Valley Fire Division Chief Miles Schuler the morning of April 22 died of a gunshot wound that was apparently self-inflicted, according to Monterey County Deputy Coroner Steve Austin.

James Kane, 46, was found four miles up Robinson Canyon Road in rural Carmel Valley. A weapon was also discovered at the scene, according to Austin.

The coroner has yet to receive the results from toxicology and other tests on the victim, but Austin said information gleaned from those tests is unlikely to change the conclusions drawn in his investigation.

CHS students get DUI lesson

By MARY BROWNFIELD

EVERY 15 minutes, a drunk driver kills someone. That was the message behind an elaborate reenactment of a fatal drunk driving accident at Carmel High April 24.

"What we're trying to teach them is they have a choice: You choose to drink and get behind the wheel of a car, you're choosing to take a life," said Cypress Fire public information officer Cheryl Goetz.

Students watched actors play out the ghastly scene of a two-car crash on a field at the school. As a CHP officer pulled booze bottles from a car next to a sheet-covered dead body and deputies questioned the vomit-covered drunken driver, firefighters used the Jaws of Life to tear the roof off another car to extricate its blood-covered passengers, some crying in agony.

The Grim Reaper meandered through the organized chaos as emergency personnel attended to the living and the dead, all of whom had apparently just left a party in Carmel Highlands.

Throughout the rest of the day, the Grim Reaper walked into a classroom every 15 minutes, silently motioned with his scythe and led a student away. A CHP officer then walked in and read the student's obituary.

Those 16 kids, as well as the five involved in the accident, gathered at the Carmel Hill Fire Station to learn how to work as a team to stop people from driving drunk, according to Goetz. The kids and one CHS faculty member — spent the night at the station, enjoyed a pancake breakfast in Carmel and were reunited with their schoolmates and families during a special assembly April 25. There they saw a video of the previous day's accident.

Although the elaborate demonstration — the first of its kind ever to be held at Carmel High — took a lot of time and effort by emergency personnel from seven agencies, Goetz said it was definitely worth it. "We told them we would much rather teach them this way than have to come out and pick them up from an accident," she said.

She heaped 90 percent of the credit on CHS senior Veronica Thaanum, who selected the 21 students and made arrangements with the principal, vice principal, parents and emergency services, according to Goetz.

As the Grim Reaper watched (below), emergency workers tended to victims of a fatal drunken driving accident staged at Carmel High this week. Workers tended to one of three students (right) who had to be rescued from a smashed vehicle with the Jaws of Life (below right).

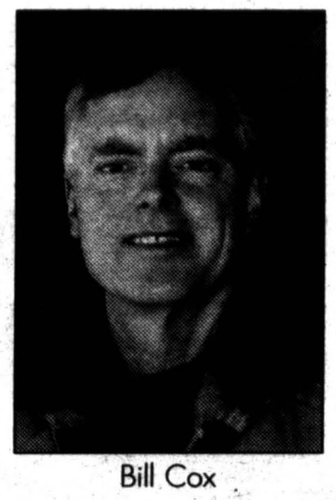
CARMELITES ROOT FOR THEIR OWN IN SUNDAY'S BIG SUR MARATHON

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HE FIGHTS fires and saves lives. He provides sought-after stamps and coins in the Carmel store he and his wife, Megan Terry, own. But native Carmelite Bill Cox also runs marathons, and the Big Sur International Marathon on April 28 will be his 36th 26.2-mile race. It will also be his 11th trip up the Big Sur Coast.

This year, he hopes to shave a couple of minutes off his best time to finish in just under four-and-a-half hours.



Bill Cox

Marathon bug bites

Cox had tackled only 10K runs for a decade before he ran his first marathon at Big Sur in 1991.

"One of the reasons I started was that I'd watched finishers and thought, 'That guy ran a marathon? He looks like a smoker and a drinker, and if he can do it, I can do it.'"

Using information from runners magazines and on the Internet, Cox trained for the grueling race, but not hard enough. His longest run had only been 14 miles.

"It was terrible; I almost died. I was at the 14-mile mark and was pretty much shot — I hit 'the wall' and was miserable for the next 12 miles," he recalled.

That misery included hallucinations and "pain you can't imagine" from his feet to his hips, he said.

It took Cox a week to recover. So why did he do it again? Let alone 34 more times?

It was runner's amnesia.

"After a while I thought, 'That wasn't so bad,'" he said. He ran in the San Francisco Marathon two months later.

"Then I got bitten by the bug."

Cox now has his training down to a science. He runs up to 40 miles a week, including a long, 13- to 19-miler every weekend, and crosstrains by cycling and swimming.

Breathtaking landscape is one of the reasons Cox runs, but it's not the most compelling. "You get an endorphin high, and it makes you feel good when you're through," he said. "And being able to do something like that just makes you feel better about yourself."

According to Cox, running improves life in general, including "the way you look, feel, act and are able to handle day-to-day problems. It makes me really mellow."

On the job at the Carmel Fire Department, people count on Cox's calmness amidst the intensity of firefighting, and while strong lungs and heart come in handy on the job, he insisted he's no superman.

Cox feels primed for this year's Big Sur race because he ran the Los Angeles Marathon two months ago and has simply maintained his fitness level since.

His favorite part of the coastal course is the three downhill miles from the top of Hurricane Point — a name embraced by marathoners because of the strong headwinds that make running up a two-mile hill even tougher.

One of Cox's most memorable marathons was in 1998, when El Niño storms washed out the road and runners were forced to do a 26.2-mile round-trip to Bixby Bridge.

"We got to see the course in a different way," he said.

And no one had to run up Hurricane Point.

Like many enthusiasts, Cox encouraged anyone with a hankering to face a marathon to take on the challenge.

Brand-new baby boy waited for no one — not even the doctor

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CAREGIVER LEA Miller could have used a helping hand herself April 16, when she delivered a baby boy on the floor of a Casanova Street home while her elderly employer slept in a bedroom nearby.

Miller, a Seaside resident, and her third child were still on the floor in the front hallway of Eve Sorey's house when Carmel police, fire and ambulance personnel answered an early-morning emergency call, according to Carmel Police Sgt. John Nyunt.

"We got a medical call on 911, and I remember the dispatcher saying, 'Someone's having a baby!'" Nyunt said. With lights flashing, he arrived around 3:30 a.m. to find two men sleeping in a car parked in front of Sorey's house.

Nyunt woke the men to ask if either had called 911, or if they knew about a pregnant woman in a nearby home.

"One of them said, 'Yeah, my sister,' and I said, 'She's having her baby!' And we all ran in and she'd already had the baby," he said. "And there was this little boy, just sitting there all healthy looking with his mom, and that was it. She was fine."

At that moment, Carmel Fire Department and Carmel Regional Fire and Ambulance pulled up in front of the home.

"When we arrived on the scene, we walked into the house and there she was, sitting on the hallway floor with a baby in her arms," said CFD engineer Bill Cox.

He and fellow firefighters August Beacham and Uli Peretz, along with paramedic Walter Heinze and EMT John Bostwick, made sure Miller and her new baby made it safely to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for a checkup.

"She was sort of in shock, I guess — she wasn't talking too much," Cox said. "So the paramedic just clipped the umbilical cord, and then transported mom and baby to CHOMP."

Sorey, who was not awakened during the whole amazing event at her house, explained why Miller was there in the wee hours of the morning.

"She was on the night shift because I recently broke my wrist and have to have someone here in case I need something," she said.

In his 24 years with the fire department, Cox had never before been so soon on the scene of a birth.

"I have had them going into labor and have talked them into holding out until they got to the hospital," he said. "But this is the first one I've seen right afterward."

Nyunt said he was amazed by how quickly and easily the baby seemed to be born.

"Who needs a doctor?" he asked.

Carmel students see taxpayer dollars at work

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A SCHOOL library with space for a ton of books and dozens of kids. Asbestos-free, brightly lit classrooms. Locker rooms that no longer elicit shivers of revulsion. Roofs that don't leak. Two years after Carmel voters approved a $20 million bond to fix up seven schools in the Carmel Unified School District, much of the work is done and the students are already enjoying the changes, according to CUSD Director of Business Services Judy Long.

As work wraps up at the first couple of schools to reap the bond's benefits — Carmel River School and Captain Cooper in Big Sur — construction is slated to begin this summer at the remaining four sites: Tularcitos Elementary, Carmel Middle School, Carmel Valley High School and Carmelo Child Development Center.

Construction got under way last summer at Carmel High School — the district's oldest facility and the one in need of the most work — and will continue through next spring, according to Long. A remodeled entry, refurbished locker rooms, and improved cafeteria and gym facilities all grace Carmel High School's list of improvements.

Carmel River School students are already using their new library and will soon be learning in a new classroom wing; Captain Cooper now has new classrooms and a multipurpose room.

At Tularcitos, a new library is the largest project on the modernization agenda.

Middle school projects will include remodeling the decrepit locker rooms.

In addition to the new floor already installed in the gym, workers will refurbish the walls and add a foyer "because the winds take the dirt and grit into the gym, and that's not good for the floor," she added.

The bond has also covered and will continue to pay for a litany of improvements at all the schools, including new ventilation and heating systems; fresh carpet, paint and ceiling tiles in the classrooms as needed; remodeled restrooms; upgraded electrical, plumbing, walkways and parking lots; new doors, windows and exterior paint; and asbestos removal.

"Paint, carpet and new lighting make such a huge difference," Long said.

If all goes well, the projects at all the schools will be wrapped up by the end of next year.

Voters' costs drop

Property owners within CUSD boundaries will pay even less money for the bond than was pitched to voters two years ago, according to Long, due to favorable bond ratings and lower-than-expected interest rates. The district had pegged the annual taxpayer cost at $19 per $100,000 of assessed property value, but the actual bill will be closer to $14.

"That's a reduction of nearly 25 percent from election estimates," she said. "It's certainly good for everyone who lives in our area."

High bond ratings from Standard & Poor's and Fitch are partially to thank, Long added.

"One of them gave us an AA+ and at that point, neither had ever given an AA+ [to a school district] before. It was a real vote of confidence."

Ocean studies lure Carmel Valley activist north

By MARY BROWNFIELD

GEORGE AND Susan Boehlert — Carmel Valley residents well known for everything from honey and hikes to academics and activism — will soon pack their bags and head north to Oregon.

George Boehlert, a marine biologist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Pacific Fisheries Environmental Laboratory in Pacific Grove, is leaving to take over as director of the Mark Hatfield Marine Science Center at Oregon State University. The couple will live in Newport, the fishing port they called home 20 years ago.

"We've always kind of had in the back of our minds going back to Oregon, and this position came open when the director there retired," said Boehlert, who moved to the valley with his family in 1993.

With his job as president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (he was recently replaced by John Dalessio) and roles on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's Carmel River Advisory Committee, the Big Sur Land Trust and the Carmel River Watershed Council, Boehlert frequently spoke at public meetings. He spearheaded the symbolic 1999 effort to have the Carmel River listed as one of the "Most Endangered Rivers" in the United States and "was a key figure in developing serious widespread interest in the study of incorporation" of Carmel Valley, according to Paola Berthoin.

And as if that weren't enough, Boehlert also cultivated his own bees and bottled and sold their honey under the moniker Carmel Valley Honey. Susan Boehlert served on the natural resources committee for the League of Women Voters and volunteered in Planned Parenthood's fundraising efforts and at Carmel High School. She was also secretary of the local Audubon Society chapter, worked as a docent for the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District and led hikes at Pt. Lobos and for the Big Sur Land Trust.

Susan and George Boehlert

Although their absence will be felt, George Boehlert said many are poised to fill his roles.

"You know Carmel Valley," he said. "There are a lot of young activists willing to step in and fight what needs to be fought."

The Boehlerts plan to be in Oregon come July, and are rushing to prepare their Miramonte home for sale and pare their possessions down to the necessities. He has already arranged who gets custody of his honey bees.

Charley and Nancy Abildgaard now have the hives, which bee-expert Boehlert closed up after the bees went to bed one night and then transported to their new valley home.

As for what extracurricular activities await the Boehlerts in the Pacific Northwest, he said he expects to discover that once he and his wife are settled.

"It will evolve just like it did here," he said. "It's something I enjoy doing, obviously, so I'm sure I'll find [issues]."

County seeks opinions on fate of C.V. bridges

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHILE THE county public works department might prefer replacing the old Boronda and Schulte road bridges — which don't meet earthquake safety standards — with new two-lane bridges with bike lanes and walkways, 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter wants to make sure that's not the only option presented to the board of supervisors in June.

And to ensure valley residents who love the old bridges have ample time to comment on their future, Potter also requested more public hearings and extended comment periods for the environmental reports. The public works department hosted a meeting on the Schulte Bridge April 22 and scheduled another on the Boronda Bridge April 29.

"I'm not necessarily saying public works is having 100 percent closed minds, but at a bare minimum they should be offering the supervisors some alternatives," Potter said. "I don't want an all-or-nothing proposal before the board."

Public works engineer Paul Greenway said his department favors replacing the bridges because it would be the safest option, but that the environmental impact reports will address several options, including seismic retrofits, replacing the bridges and relocating the old spans, and doing nothing. The public can comment until April 30 for the Schulte Bridge and May 7 for the Boronda Bridge.

"The main issues are these bridges are single-lane access to the communities — there's only one way in and one way out — and the new bridge would provide better emergency access with two lanes," Greenway said, adding that neither bridge currently has room for bicyclists or pedestrians.

Residents worry new two-lane bridges will encourage speeding, hurt the rural character of the neighborhood and lead to more development — issues the public works departments says it will address.

Carmel Valley Fire Department told the county its engines have no trouble making it across the bridges, but Greenway said he's had to turn down other emergency requests to drive heavy firefighting equipment over them.

"But during an emergency, firefighters would want to enter the community while everyone's trying to exit — that being the only entrance and exit — and we've received a letter from the fire department indicating they favor a two-lane bridge."

Potter said he did not want to discount the safety issue, but suggested retrofitting the bridges and adding pedestrian access might be a better route.

"I'm not a real fan of taking the bridges down. I'm from New England, and we still have covered bridges," he said. "I don't necessarily think that just because they have the money we have to put in a generic, Caltrans-designed bridge."

Public works officials, engineers, designers and environmental consultants will field questions on the Boronda Bridge at a meeting set for 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. April 29 at the C.V. Trail and Saddle Club. Written comments can be sent to Doug Poochigian, Monterey County Department of Public Works, 312 East Alisal Street, Salinas, CA 93901.

"Then we will prepare the final EIR and present it to the supervisors for a decision on which alternative they would like to see built," Greenway said.

PRESIDENTS MESSAGE

by Demi Briscoe

The municipal election is history. We congratulate the winners, Mayor Sue McCloud, and Council Members Hazdovac and Rose. We thank all of the candidates who ran in the election and aired many of the most important issues of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. It is through this orderly process that voters select those individuals who best represent the views and visions of our community. We in the business sector are eager to move ahead with the important work of revitalizing the health and character of the commercial district. This includes tackling critical issues which face our community: the need for a parking solution(s), a plan for attracting the "right" type of business to fill vacancies in our district, the attraction of visitors to our area who will stay longer than a day and enjoy our attractive shops, restaurants and inns.

We welcome participation from the entire community on our committees dealing with these issues. We are working behind the scene to address the problems and try out some new solutions. Please call our office, or one of us personally, should you have an idea which you feel might be a solution. Let's think outside the box to find balances necessary for win-win outcomes.

STAIRS

But Ely and Livingston argued that sending back grant money will only hurt future efforts to go after state and federal funding.

"This project demonstrates to the state that we're interested in grants and will match grants and that will open the door for future grants," said Ely. "If we go back to the people who approved the grant and say, 'Sorry' . . . I don't think we'll ever see another cent from them."

The project to build a permanent beach stairway at 12th Avenue has been in the works for several years. The $165,000 coastal conservancy grant was first awarded to the city in 1999.

The city solicited bids from as many as 15 contractors for the project, but only two firms replied. The lowest bid came in at $340,000 — more than double the coastal conservancy grant. Ely pointed out that the city is due some reimbursements from FEMA — for storm repairs already completed — which could possibly take care of the city's portion of the funding.

But others pointed out that the FEMA reimbursement is by no means guaranteed and if it does come through, the money should probably be used to build up the storm reserves.

City councilwoman Paula Hazdovac explained her change of heart by reading an e-mail the council received from Carmel resident Marge Adams who wondered why the city would spend so much money on the stairway when the fire station remains unprepared for an earthquake.

The councilwoman quoted Adam's letter, which noted, "Earthquakes surprise us."

Hazdovac also noted that the city has another permanent beach stairway within 50 to 70 feet.

Rose said he had received feedback from residents unhappy about the high cost of replacing the stairway.

"We need to take a hard look at every nickel we're spending," Rose said. "I like the project. Frankly, I wish we could build it."

Fish or cut bait

Livingston pointed out that the coastal conservancy grant can't be transferred to other more pressing projects. "I would like it known to some of the people who feel the money be moved to the fire house that we can't do that with grant monies."

When asked about making cuts to the project to bring the costs down, city administrator Rich Guillen replied it's unlikely the city could trim more than the $26,000 off the project which had already been discussed with the contractor.

McCloud wondered if the city could put the project on hold until it has a better handle on this year's revenues.

"This thing has been going on for a year and a half," Guillen said. "The reality is that you either have to go forward tonight or give the money back."

After the meeting, Livingston accused the council of "squandering away our future with their short term thinking." It makes no sense to hire a full time grant writer — an idea introduced at the meeting — if the city is going to return grant money, she argued.

The original concrete stairs at 12th Avenue, destroyed by the 1982/83 El Niño storms, were replaced with a temporary wooden staircase. That stairway is still in use, although it has sustained damage over the years and is currently listing from the impact of the waves.

Election rivalry shows itself at council

By TAMARA GRIPPI

LEFTOVERS FROM Carmel's hard-fought campaign between Mayor Sue McCloud and councilwoman Barbara Livingston spilled out during the first council meeting after the election.

As the council discussed its budget priorities April 18, the mood was sometimes tense when Livingston and McCloud clashed over which city projects should get top billing.

The two women first squared off over what kind of priority to give the beautification of San Carlos Street — a project Livingston has long championed.

"Assigning 'Priority Two' to the San Carlos streetscape is like assigning the San Carlos streetscape to never-never land," Livingston said. "A $155,000 grant was given to the city for the project. All the city has to do is approve another grant of $30,000 and the city wouldn't have to put up any matching funds."

But McCloud countered that a traffic survey should be taken care of first, to be fair to the people of the other eight areas of town. And she intimated that Livingston had a conflict of interest in pushing this project.

"You would not support the traffic survey, but you would support [improvements] to three blocks almost in front of your house," McCloud said to Livingston. In order "for the people we've talked to in the Northeast to feel they're being treated equally, we need to have that survey done."

Livingston told McCloud that the city has already ignored that area of town "when you and other members of council successfully turned down a grant to make improvements to the Northeast."

Business retention

Later in the meeting, Livingston asked McCloud to give details about one of the mayor's priorities. "Maybe the council needs to know more about the business retention program," Livingston said.

McCloud answered that "we're trying to come up with a proposal for a search committee to actively look for businesses we'd like to see in Carmel. We talked to the Carmel Business Association about a mentoring program."

Livingston contended that "the council ought to know about the [programs] in order to understand what's happening."

"I did announce that Dick [Ely] and I had a meeting [with the business district] in January," McCloud said.

Near the end of the meeting Livingston said she was "late for an appointment" and wanted to go ahead with the vote on the 12th Avenue stairway project.

McCloud reminded Livingston that she should give everyone a chance to have their say, "just like you like to have your say."

BURGLARIES

the home is still under construction. "But it's not too easy to get into this place because they're rebuilding the bridge in front, so how would someone carry off that much equipment? There's no way someone's going to do it from the beach — someone had to park nearby."

The Panattonis have security guards posted at the residence 24 hours a day during construction, and Chandler has been interviewing them and other workers to learn how someone could break in, find equipment stored in remote parts of the large house and haul it off without anyone seeing.

And in addition to a March 19 break-in at a Lasuen residence where crooks smashed a sliding glass door but only got so far as one room before setting off the alarm and fleeing, Chandler is looking for leads in the April 6 burglary of a house at Sixth and Santa Rita in which the crooks dragged a 100-pound, 2-foot-by-3-foot floor safe down the driveway to a waiting vehicle.

"They went through an unlocked sliding glass door, ransacked the place and found the safe by mistake," Chandler said. "They took the whole safe and inside was $60,000 worth of jewelry."

He suspects the perpetrators may be those who struck several Carmel homes a few months back, smashing windows or doors during daylight hours to gain entry and steal jewelry and other precious items.

Incidents on the sheriff's department's list include March 22 and March 26 burglaries at homes on Yankee Point Drive and Outlook Drive in which the suspects stole jewelry and money.

Thieves also raided construction sites for tools on April 1 at a Yankee Point Drive home and at a Scenic Road property one week later.

Chandler believes the key to catching the thieves lies in collaborating with the sheriff's department and advising citizens on how to protect their homes.

His suggestions: Lock doors and windows, move valuables around in their homes rather than leaving them in the same place, use their alarm systems, and leave inside and outside lights on, as well as a TV or radio — anything that might suggest someone is at home.

He also asked residents to report anything unusual.

"Look at vehicles on your street: Are they familiar? Look at people. If a person is sitting in a car someplace, call it in and we'll check it out," he said. "We would rather check it out and have it be nothing than have another burglary."

Il Forniao sued over dangerous floor mat

AN "EXCESSIVELY high floor mat" inside a doorway at Il Fornaio Restaurant in Carmel caused Peninsula resident Jill Verhaak to trip and fall a year ago, according to a lawsuit she filed in Monterey County Superior Court April 2.

Charging Il Fornaio with general negligence and premises liability for allowing "to exist a dangerous condition" that caused Verhaak to "sustain personal injuries upon exiting the defendant's restaurant," she is asking the court to award her $10,000 in compensation for wage loss, hospital and medical expenses, and general damage.

"Defendant's placement of such a mat was a breach of its duty to maintain safe conditions on its premises," according to the complaint.

JUDGE SILVER

crusading lawyer.

In an era of high-profile, controversial cases as well as garden-variety civil disputes, he became a strong advocate of open communication between opposing factions. When labor disputes threatened to erupt into violence, Silver imposed conditions to foster talks among United Farm Workers and non-union workers in a dispute with property owners and growers.

"The theory was, the more you allowed people to communicate, although within certain time limits, the less violence there would be, because it's the frustration from an inability to communicate that leads people to become upset and violent," he said. "We tried it, and it worked."

He also ruled Soledad Prison could not control the content of an inmate newspaper unless it threatened security, and decided the City of Oakland could not use eminent domain to keep the Oakland Raiders football team in town.

Known for his expertise in California environmental laws, Silver's rulings have had a major impact on land use and planning in Monterey County. His decisions led to the rewrite of the Carmel Valley Master Plan in 1986 and overturned the county's approval of the September Ranch development.

"We don't tell the boards of supervisors what to do — [but] we make sure that they appropriately consider the laws as they exist," he said.

George said she admires Silver for his fair and accurate decisions.

"Development and water issues are very touchy subjects," she said. "He always looks at a case, reads the law and makes the decision he thinks is right regardless of whether it's popular with anyone."

The county's judicial system flourished under Silver when he was presiding judge, and garnered a reputation as one of the most efficient and effective court systems in the nation. He regularly culls through cases to make sure they are progressing rather than stagnating.

"Having a strong civil justice system is so important, so I've spent much time over the last 15 years helping develop a fair civil system that gives people a fair day in court in a reasonable amount of time," said Silver.

He taught management skills to judges around the country and was even offered a job helping Russia establish its judicial system — an offer he declined because he did not want to leave his family.

Sheriff's Deputy Lisa Nash, Silver's bailiff for more than three years, said he served as her mentor while she attended law school.

"He was always open for questions about the law — he's a great teacher and a great role model, too," she said.

Teresa Carey, Silver's clerk for the last six years, said she knew she wanted to work for him the moment she set foot in his courtroom, and that he's taught her the true meaning of integrity.

"He reads everything and he remembers everything," she said. "He's detail-oriented and that's something he expects out of me, too."

Carey said she remains impressed by Silver's ability to treat everyone with dignity and respect, even in the most emotionally charged situations.

"When he told me he was going to retire, I said, 'After you've worked for the best, it's all downhill.'"

Because he was appointed to the bench by a Democrat, Silver had no opportunity to move to the appeals court during California's 16 years (1982-1998) with Republican governors. And Democrat Gray Davis has declined to give Silver a promotion.

Even though Silver is leaving the bench, the Carmel Highlands resident does not expect to be far from the fray as the county continues to grapple with development and environmental issues.

"This is a community that cares about people," he said. "It has problems and tensions, but is a beautiful place to live not only from aesthetics, but from the way people are."

Roncarati pointed out that the cruise ship passengers are Carmel's ideal market — visitors coming mid-week and off-season with plenty of money to spend. "That's who we want to come back," she said.

And what may be much more important to Carmel than a one-day influx of shoppers is the ability to tap into that market and convince those travelers to return for longer visits.

"We're looking to the long term," said Roncarati, who worked on the project with CBA marketing chairwoman Tammy Tharp.

The CBA will use several clever marketing tools, including giving cruise ship passengers canvas shopping bags with a Carmel logo, stuffed with promotional materials including a little card that will explain "what you can do in a day in Carmel and what you can't do in one day, but which you can do on your next visit."

Demi Briscoe, president of the CBA, was enthusiastic about the unique opportunity to market Carmel. "We're hoping to give a taste of what the village is like — to instill a wish to come back and visit Carmel for a prolonged stay," she said.

Briscoe called the shopping shuttles "a win-win — because the shuttles run all day, people will be able to spend as much or little time as they want and we won't be congesting the town with cars."

It was the CBA's quick response to the news of cruise ships arriving in Monterey Bay back in January that helped the Carmel organization work out a sweet deal with the cruise line — including having 1,500 copies of the Guide to Carmel passed out on the ship.

"As soon as we heard about the cruise ships coming in, we contacted the cruise line directly," Roncarati said. "We learned that cruise ships don't actually care for shopping shuttles because they compete with their organized tours."

But with the help of the Crossroads, the CBA was able to negotiate with the cruise line, offering tour bus parking at the mouth of the valley shopping center as a bargaining chip.

Roncarati received promising data from the cruise line showing that, of the 2,800 passengers, at least 1,000 will be disembarking with no set plans for the day. Roncarati also pointed to statistics showing that the average cruise ship passenger spends about $90 in each port and will likely book return visits.

The CBA will be able to offset its costs by charging a $10 fee for the shopping shuttles — the cruise line didn't want the shuttle to be free — and by making use of 26 CBA members volunteering as guides on the shuttles and helping out at the CBA's information table at the Custom House Plaza and kiosk in front of Carmel Plaza.

The net cost of the whole shuttle project will be $1,000, Roncarati said.

"We'll be ready to do this again in September and October," she said.

Pacific Repertory Theatre: LET'S TALK 20

By ANNE PAPINEAU

SATURDAY'S ANNIVERSARY gala staged by and honoring Carmel-based Pacific Repertory Theatre is titled "Two Decades of Laughter and Tears." Present will be many of PacRep's founding company members, past board presidents and those donor "angels" without whose monetary support no fledgling could take wing, much less keep flying.

And present also will be Stephen Moorer, the Children's Experimental Theatre/Carmel High alumnus who founded tiny GroveMont Community Theatre in 1982 with modest resources and major ambitions. Moorer shepherded the company through name changes, location switches, a mortgage burning party and uncounted curtain calls.

Moorer calls himself "truly an optimist. I look at the bright side of everything we do." But he tempers the optimism with a businessman's practicality.

"I was under no illusions or delusions about how difficult it would be and what the odds were of creating a successful regional theater. We were touting phrases like becoming 'The Ashland of the Central Coast.' I knew it would be a huge amount of work," Moorer told The Pine Cone.

POETRY, flowers, music, art, and tea — and those little sandwiches — will be presented in one of Carmel's unique and historic settings from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, May 5.

Robinson Jeffers' Tor House, Hawk Tower and gardens on Carmel Point will be open to the public for this once-a-year tea party to which visitors are invited to bring their cameras.

Admission is $12 general and $10 seniors. There are no advance reservations, and only children over 12 years of age may attend with adults.

A wish upon a star granted to terminally ill children

"When YOU Wish Upon a Star" said it all for the gala held by the Make-a-Wish Foundation for terminally ill children. Held at Spanish Bay, it featured comedian Paul Rodriguez who, in turn, was entertained by Clint Eastwood at the dinner table . . . Thanks to a hard-working committee of Dina Eastwood, Valentia Piccinini, Jamel Ehnisz, Ksenija Halamandaris and Cynthia House, this event was a great success, in contrast to last year's, when, as Ksenija said, "we could barely fill tables!" . . . Bob Piccinini's secret to a peaceful life? "When it's stressful, I'm in Modesto," he joked, referring to their other home. FYI: their daughter works for Madonna in London — definitely a book in the works! . . . Kirkor Kocek donated a pearl & diamond ring for the cause . . . Safwat & Allyson Malek and Mahmoud & Margaret Abouzeid chatted with Sloane Bentley of "the" Bentley cars . . . Rich & Ann Patterson took a break from Lily, their "5-year-old with an attitude" and her sister, "sweet" Emma, 3 . . . Alex Forbes caught up with Connie Yost, a top equestrienne . . . Attorney Jeff Gilles had to persuade court reporter Sue to mix business with pleasure and marry him . . . Seen, too, were: Gary & Jeanette Kihs, Bill & Pat Huber, David & Susan Gill, Tom & Judy Romans, Ron & Suzy Faia, Alyce Nunes, Pat & Annette Welton, Anne Buran, Mastaneh Brett, Jane Ord and Marize Briggs.

■ Quilts to warm your soul

If quilts leave you cold, don't miss this happening next year — it'll win you over. Monterey Peninsula Quilters Guild's 27th annual Quilt Show at Pacific Grove's Chautauqua Hall was a delight to the senses. As chair and blue-ribbon winner Janet Taillon (who's only a two-year quilter) pointed out, "People in this guild are so talented, and we had so many come in for the show." Her hubby Dave Whittick, along with Bonnie Tomsheck's husband Tom Carrico, helped assemble the show . . . Andrea Segura, a 21-year quilter, makes baby quilts for friends' newborns . . ."People this creative and this disciplined are really neat," she said . . . Jeannie Oliveria, along with a group of others, has made dozens of prenatal quilts, lap quilts and other items for donations. She, along with sister Anne Frank, Louise Doutrich and Janice Cooke, greeted visitors . . . Dr. Pamela Craig of CHOMP's new Breast Care Center, recently renovated her mother's Depression Era quilt, appreciating the emotional connection it provides . . . Rosemary Houser, who sticks to handwork, won two blue ribbons, while her sister, Peggy Hisatomi, prefers the sewing machine for her quilting . . . Lucy Lee, who teaches quilting at the Carmel Adult School, also does awesome bead work and doesn't even sell it. She organized the making of commemorative quilts to be sent back east for the 9/11 firefighters. "We felt really good and signed each one with a little message on the back," she said . . . Also seen were Marie & Jim Colbert, Debra Rubin, George & Patty Walker, Darlene Arnold, Betty Crowder, Alice Gutierrez and Don & Noreen Nance. Two-year quilter Noreen said they were all friends of Janet Taillon: "She inspired all of us!" Noreen's currently working on a major fundraiser for the Pacific Grove Public Library.

■ Friends of Sunset honor hard workers

The Friends of Sunset Foundation held its annual reception to honor individual efforts at Morley Brown's party house, "Sheepy Hollow." President Jean White had a long list of members to express gratitude to, including generous, low-key supporters like Pat Ramsay and Alan & Jean Brenner. Familiar faces seen included Mary & Robert Condry, Joe & Louise Tanous, Fran Nickles, Sandy Chaix, Mark Starr, and Fred Nelson, who's going to host his infamous biennial Halloween party this year . . . Peggy Gelke, a two-time cancer survivor, looked great and fit, playing tennis regularly . . . Reid & Susi Wagstaff are getting reacquainted with the group after raising kids and retiring. Reid's working on getting a children's book published.

■ United Way celebrates capital campaign

It was a capital campaign wrap-up celebration for the United Way at their Marriott Hotel event, having raised $2.75 million in one year to the relief of campaign honchos Morley Brown and Ed Carney . . . Award-nominated 'Jocasta' relegates Oedipus to shadows

By BEVERLY HILL VAN JOOLEN

SOPHOCLES, AUTHOR of "Oedipus the King," lets the Queen of Thebes' suicide speak to her state of mind following a lifetime of tragedy. But for award-winning playwright Sandra Perlman, there was far too much left unsaid. She rectifies Sophocles' oversight in "Jocasta," and in its West Coast premiere, Staff Players Repertory Company gives the queen's side of the story a poignant and engaging telling.

When King Oedipus realized the ancient prophecy — foretelling he would one day kill his father, marry his mother and sire children by her — had indeed been fulfilled, he "tore the brooches" from his dead wife's robe "and dashed them on his own eyeballs." His queen had hanged herself, and her story was done. But what of Jocasta? What torments had Oedipus' wife suffered before she died? What pushed her to take her life? What had her involvement in the saga really been?

Perlman's work, nominated "Best New Play," by the American Theatre Critics Association, spends two crucial days with the doomed queen — the night before her second marriage and the afternoon of her death. Jocasta, played with elegance by talented actress MaryAnn Schaupp-Rousseau, is not alone. With her are her overbearing and eccentric mother, Ismene, portrayed by Constance Denning, and Iris, Jocasta's devoted maid, played by Virginia Daggett.

Theater Review

As Ismene, Denning is delightfully devious and tragically meddlesome. Daggett's Iris is a stirringly tender blend of optimism, simpleton innocence, and desperate helplessness. Carey Crockett designed the lavish set and scenic art magic. The luxurious costumes were created by Adrienne Wellisch.

"Jocasta" attempts to answer the unanswerable. Justify the unjustifiable. How far can the boundaries of understanding and acceptance of the most heinous of crimes be pushed? Would a threat to a woman's own well being, her husband's security or the family's position in the community be enough to justify her infamous actions? What if a child's life and immortal soul or the viability and continuance of the state were in imminent and intractable danger? Would she then be absolved of both the legal and moral ramifications? "Jocasta" approaches these questions with humor, wit and pathos.

Perlman's work suggests how one woman, the Queen of Thebes, dealt with the horror that turned out to be her life, but don't expect a traditional Greek tragedy. There's no chorus and no highbrow verbiage to sift through. Neither is there a male-dominant point of view. The essence of Perlman's "Jocasta" is more in the flavor of "Thelma and Louise," or "The Mists of Avalon."

And what of Oedipus, the tragic hero? The king is nothing more than a shadow within Jocasta's life.

Produced at the Indoor Forest Theatre, the play, expertly directed by Marcia Gambrell Hovick, is an excellent choice for the Staff Players' season finale. "Jocasta" is an intriguing look at a character far too long

'Laramie Project' addresses tragedy in remarkably affirmative way

By DEBORAH SHARP

WHEN MOISES Kaufman, Tectonic Theater Project founder, decided to tackle the subject of gay college student Matthew Shepard's murder in Laramie, Wyoming, he didn't want to use traditional play form. Instead, he challenged his company to answer, "Is theater a medium that can contribute to the national dialogue on current events?"

Theater Review

The result is a play based on 200 interviews conducted by Theater Project members with citizens of Laramie. These were presented verbatim in a montage of brief monologues that, overall, create a portrait of a town coming to terms with brutality and intolerance.

Because "The Laramie Project" isn't built around the traditional format of a few characters whose personalities are fully drawn and change gradually as a result of the events in a play, there isn't the usual dramatic tension. The pivotal event has already taken place, and we are left with the result: citizens who don't want to believe what has happened in "Wyoming's home town."

While the play may lack dramatic tension, it does depict the contradictions that exist in all of us. No one is completely good or bad; no one is as altruistic, selfless or compassionate in the face of injustice as one would like to be; no one is without prejudice. Laramie is defended by its citizens as a town where "Hate is not a value," and the adage "Live and let live" is practiced. But it is acknowledged that "Shit happens in Laramie," and an overly verbal young Islamic feminist student likens the town to an Escher image with its characteristic commingling of light and dark. "We need to own this crime," she declares. "We are like this."

The fast-paced delivery of small monologues delivered by the 77 people portrayed creates a dizzying collage. Like an Escher work, the light and dark sides of personalities, actions and values are presented whole cloth, and viewers are left to deal with the resulting ambiguities and contradictions.

The confused wife of a highway patrolman tries to grapple with the conflicting emotions she feels over the highly publicized death of Shepard and the barely mentioned death of a local patrolman around the same time. The injustice rankles. A straight drama student plays a homosexual in a dialogue he performs for a scholarship competition. After Shepard's murder he admits he used the striking dialogue simply to win the competition, but his success vis-a-vis the dramatic death begins to change his homophobia.

The local Catholic priest immediately organizes a vigil when he learns of the murder without first conferring with his bishop, but a Mormon minister, while personally decrying the murder, nonetheless notes that his religion sets boundaries, and homosexuality is outside those boundaries.

Contradictions

Even the contradictions in Shepard himself are hinted at. Both shy and blunt, he was known as a compassionate person and a passionate political activist. He also hung out alone at a local bar and went off with two men very unlike himself.

The strength of the acting comes in the eight performers' abilities to create a "unit of energy," a term used by one of them in a post-performance discussion with the audience. Jane Press, Dawn Flood, Greg Falge, Flip Baldwin, Fred Herro, Mike Newman, Jill Jackson and Jolie Kobrinsky work seamlessly to create the collage of characters that is Laramie. They begin the play as Kaufman (Fred Herro) and the seven members of the Theater Project go to Laramie. They quickly become, in rapid succession, a variety of townspeople, each with his or her identifying piece of clothing taken from wooden prop boxes on either side of the bare, raked stage. Some of the characters appear only once, but some appear often, providing threads of continuity.

One such character is Doc O'Connor, played well by Newman. Doc is a self-important limo driver who nonetheless charms us with his straight talk about Laramie. Another character who makes repeated, pivotal appearances is the earnest Catholic priest, Father Roger, played by Baldwin. He admonishes the members of the Theater Project to "tell it correct," so as not to perpetuate the violence of the murder which he fears the media will do.

Falge is good as the acting student, Jedediah Shultz, whose personal change as a result of the murder is one of the most obvious. Jolie Kobrinsky is particularly strong as Reggie, the policewoman who learns she has been exposed to HIV by treating Shepard at the scene of the crime. She and Press, as her mother, share several effective vignettes in which the feisty mother berates the equally feisty daughter for endangering her life as a policewoman. Their squabbling can't hide their devotion to each other. It is a wonderful depiction of two women with grit.

Flood captures well the Islamic feminist student. And Herro has the challenge of depicting not only Fred Phelps, the Baptist minister who harangues people at Shepard's funeral, but also Shepard's father who argues against the death penalty for his son's killers, not because he is trying to show forgiveness, but because he wants them to have to live with the knowledge of what they have done. These are ordinary people who reveal uncomfortable truths about human nature.

The staging of the play is as straight-forward as the subject matter. One especially well-staged moment comes when each actor becomes a reporter holding a flashlight as a mike and speaking simultaneously in those all-too-familiar portentous reporter tones. The townspeople of Laramie did not take kindly to the press.

The pacing of the play is fast, so the vignettes quickly add

■ SPCA gathers loyal donors

Steve & Suzanne Diamond held an SPCA fundraiser at their Scenic Road home, with their bowtie-clad SPCA dog, Duncan, as "host of honor." "Is that my bowtie he's wearing?" Steve asked Suzanne in disbelief. When she confirmed it, he sputtered, "But I have to wear it next week!" . . . Exec director Dr. Gary Tiscornia and his wife Colleen hail from Michigan. He's been in the business 26 years and the couple met at a rescue shelter in Tucson. Ghostly happenings on Hawaiian golf course lure gumshoes to Kohala Coast

IF MYSTERIES and golf suit you to a tee, Lee Tyler is the author you need to know about.

Tyler is a fine writer (you've read reviews in The Bookshelf of her previous golf novels, including "The Case of the Missing Links"); she's a long-time golf travel writer, having published more than 80 articles on golf in Hawai'i (a purist, that's the way she spells it); and pens a golf column for GolfWeb.

Tyler lives in Burlingame but is a frequent visitor to Carmel-by-the-Sea and Pebble Beach, which have figured prominently in the aforementioned books.

But this latest novel, "The Teed-Off Ghost — a Hawaiian Golf Mystery," takes place entirely in Hawai'i, on the Kohala Coast, at a luxury golf resort that's just about ready to open when the book commences.

Tyler's protagonists, California private eyes Harry "Win" Winslow and June Jacobs, who are also golfers and lovers, are hired by an old friend who designed the golf course, Mauna Makai. Strange things are happening at the resort — so strange they defy comprehension — and so disruptive, they have to be stopped before the grand opening. And then there's the problem of some missing golf course plans . . .

In solving the baffling case, Win and June mesh with some interesting people involved in the underground movement for Hawaiian independence, a lovely hula dancer caught in a love triangle, a wise kahuna, a greenkeeper who takes his orders from a volcano goddess, and a concierge who is a repository of mythology, culture and history of Hawai'i's former sovereignty. And, oh, yes, there's an 18th century Scottish ghost who lives on the property, the original builder of an ancient wall that runs across the 14th green. But the reader is clued in from the beginning, so the puzzle fits nicely together as the plot progresses.

There is romance and sex in this book, and by the final chapter, it's hinted that Win and June's relationship will become more serious in the future.

Tyler's knowledge of golf and of golf courses allows her to write with a verisimilitude that is gratifying. Golf buffs will enjoy this 206-page trade paperback that retails for $12.95. It has just been released by Fithian Press, Santa Barbara. If you can't find the book at your favorite bookstore, ask them to order it. That's the 13th hole at Mauna Kea Golf Course on the cover.

SEATING IS available on a first-come, first-served basis at a talk and booksigning by children's author and illustrator Ray Troll who has created a children's picture book, "Sharkabet: A Sea of Sharks from A to Z." Troll will appear from 1:30 to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 27 at the Monterey Bay Aquarium to discuss the inspiration for the detailed illustrations of marine life in his humorous alphabet book. There will be 60-minute slide show presentations at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. in the aquarium's Ocean View Conference Room.

Troll has singled out some lesser-known sharks, such as the goblin shark and some of the "weirder, prehistoric ones" because he didn't want to do just a standard shark book for kids.

Visitors will need to enter the conference room through doorways adjacent to the penguin exhibit in the "Splash Zone" gallery on the aquarium's second floor Nearshore wing. For more information about the event, call 648-4888 or visit www.montereybayaquarium. org.

The book selected is "The Human Stain" by Philip Roth — a tale of academic life and the American soul. Admission is free and newcomers are always welcome.

Morgan's on the prowl for restaurant news

BUON GIORNO, Judie Profeta's very chic Carmel-by-the-Sea breakfast/luncheon establishment, is now open from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m., with pastry chef Jennifer Hatton at the helm and doing all the baking on premises. This is the former venue of Pasqual's Jazz Restaurant — on Junipero between Fifth and Sixth. Fresh muffins and pastry are available with coffee and espresso drinks and luncheon is a special of the day; today it was pasta salad, tomorrow perhaps focaccia panini. Desserts such as lemon bars and flourless chocolate cake add a touch of sweetness. Jennifer starts baking at 4 a.m., and is starting to do breads: focaccia, sourdough and baguettes, and plans to add more soon. The decor is charming: black and white against sponged yellow walls hung with photos of coffee cups and mugs. A zebra-headed faux waiter with roller skates stands holding a muffin basket near the entrance. And there is a front and back patio. Information: 624-0221.

TASTE CAFE & Bistro, Pacific Grove restaurant on the corner of Forest and Prescott, has turned groovy, not only expanding its lunching and dining spaces by 24 seats, but adding a bar and music area where live jazz will be played every Thursday from 5 to 7 p.m. — combined with happy hour and specials. The new addition is very charming and lends lots of atmosphere to Bill and Sue Karaki's cafe. For information, call 655-0324.

ROBERT KINCAID of Robert's Bistro, 217 Crossroads Blvd., Carmel, has purchased that architectural wonder which for years housed Gernot's Victoria House Restaurant at 649 Lighthouse in Pacific Grove. The various rooms with their high ceilings and large windows create a delightful dining ambience. The house has been repainted and is now being reroofed. Robert is hoping for a June opening of the still unnamed restaurant. When it opens, Robert will be going back and forth between his two restaurants. The new P.G. establishment will serve both lunch and dinner, and Robert's Bistro in Carmel will continue with dinners. More later.

THE SARDINE Factory has once again been awarded four stars by the American Automobile Association as an outstanding restaurant. The award requires that the restaurant "provide a high degree of sophistication in cuisine, service and ambience. It must demonstrate its food preparation and presentation to be complex and creative, feature an extensive wine list, provide professional service attentive to guests' needs and convey style, elegance and a high degree of refinement or formality in its decor."

Co-owners Ted Balestreri and Bert Cutino established The Sardine Factory at 701 Wave St., Monterey, in 1968. It has received many honors, including the Distinguished Restaurants of North America (DiRoNa) Award and Wine Spectator's Grand Award. To contact the restaurant, call 373-3775.

PEEL & EAT shrimp with cocktail sauce, seared ahi tuna on wontons with wasabi and pickled ginger, and Cajun popcorn shrimp are but a few of the aptly named appetizers specially priced at $1.99 offered at Chart House, Monterey, from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Located at 444 Cannery Row, Chart House can be reached at 372-3363.

MIZU SUSHI has at last opened on Mission between Fifth and Sixth, (formerly Bates Carmel Cafe) after some contractor and staffing problems, but everything now is hunky dory; locals have already discovered it and are returning with regularity. The decor is clean and arty — Japanese sparse and appealing. Owner Nina Gordev says before Memorial Day the restaurant will be open for lunch and Sunday brunch — and there will be a happy hour; but until then, the 28-seat restaurant is open from 5:30 nightly serving Japanese fare: appetizers, soup, maki, tempura and yakitori, specialties and desserts. For information, call 624-3502.

RAFFAELLO'S RESTAURANT, Mission between Ocean and Seventh, a Carmel-by-the-Sea fine dining institution for many, many years, has been sold to David Fink, formerly of Highlands Inn and Pebble Beach, and Michael Murphy. Now under extensive renovation and expansion (the former gallery next door is being amalgamated into the restaurant), the new establishment, Bouchee Bistro and name of a fundraising gala.

"The laughter, the high points make up the long list," Moorer observed. "The tears, the low points were far and few between, thank God. When we had to move out of the Monterey Playhouse, the month we gave notice, the 'for sale' sign went up at the Golden Bough. We are unique among regional theaters in that we actually own our own facility outright. It just means that much more money can go into the art and not the overhead."

He's able to honor his artistic side to a greater degree since the hiring last year of Geoffrey Shlaes as PacRep managing director. Like many an artistic enterprise, PacRep must keep running very fast just to stay in place.

"Our budget is now $1.2 million per year. That grew from a $4,000 budget in 1984. With the Golden Bough Theatre, we own a property worth $4 million," Moorer noted.

Next month the theater founder will reprise his role as John Merrick in "The Elephant Man," a part he created for GroveMont Theatre in 1988. For this PacRep production, he will be joined by Emmy-winning actress Barbara Babcock as Mrs. Kendall and soap star James Kiberd as Dr. Treves. These industry professionals are testament to PacRep's commitment to becoming an Equity house. Stage and screen star Olympia Dukakis appeared at the Golden Bough last year in PacRep's "The Cherry Orchard."

Joseph Chaikin to direct "Medea"

Expect to see the ties with Actors Equity Association grow tighter. Moorer said that next year PacRep will bring Joseph Chaikin, honored actor/writer and director who founded the Open Theatre in New York, to Carmel to direct "Medea."

"He's a regular collaborator with Shepard, Albee and Beckett. He's serious business and he got in contact with us. We're approaching a number of very exciting actresses to play Medea. That will be the opening show of next year's season."

Also on tap next year are Shakespeare's "Henry VI, parts I and II," and a musical Moorer fell in love with in London, "Buddy," based on the life of rock 'n' roll legend Buddy Holly.

Twenty years of theater is tough to encapsulate in a few phrases.

"One of those happy surprises through all these years is our mission has remained consistent. We tackled a lot of material and haven't shied away from risky choices. It's been embraced, funded and supported on all levels."

Critics took some pot shots at PacRep's "Cherry Orchard," and in response to this the Moorer optimism kicks in.

"'The Cherry Orchard' is tough material no matter who does it. We were disappointed because we had just three and half weeks to rehearse that play, and we'd prefer five or six weeks. It's a lesson learned. It's a play to attract people to. That makes it right up our alley. Sounds good to me. (He laughs). Over 4,000 people saw it here, people who never came to PacRep before."

The founder hopes to draw ever bigger audiences from a wider geographic range. And he hopes they enjoy the show.

"We're just out of our teenage years. As we develop our Equity contract, I think it's going to be very exciting."

Ensemble Monterey performs

Musical director John Anderson of Ensemble Monterey will conduct "Once in a Decade," featuring the choral group Cantiamo Cabrillo. Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday, April 26 at Hartnell College, Salinas and 8 p.m. Saturday, April 27 at the Carmel Mission. Information: 333-1283.

LARAMIE

up to the reality of Laramie. However the overall scope of the play is too broad. Not only are we given the town's reaction to the murder itself, but we are also present for parts of the funeral, the arraignment, and both trials. There are dramatic moments in all of these events: the confession of Aaron McKinney, the sentencing of both men and the statement by Shepard's father, but somehow they seem superfluous after the views of the townspeople themselves.

The more formal moments lack the shoot-from-the-hip spontaneity of the vignettes, where the naturalness and candor create the strength of the play. Each character depicted has been touched in some way by the murder of Matthew Shepard.

Kaufman's uniquely crafted play allows us to see how events — even tragic, unthinkable ones — can be positive forces in the growth of individuals. It is not a grim play; it shows us life as it is and that can never be entirely negative.

Always known to her family and friends as Betty, she was born in 1903 in Omaha, Neb. She attended boarding school in Tennessee and Binghampton, N.Y. and was married in Omaha to Roderick Dhu Clark. Later, they made their home in Wilmette, Ill., where they raised their family prior to moving to Carmel in the 1950s.

Mrs. Clark was an active member of the Christian Science Church in Carmel and the Carmel Foundation.

She is survived by her daughters, Bonnie Dhu Pinkham of Carmel and Heather Keeney of Vacaville; son Raymond of Texas; two grandsons and five great grandchildren.

A private remembrance has taken place, and a family celebration of Mrs. Clark's life is planned.

LEROY L. KOHN of Pebble Beach died March 19. He was 83.

A native of Chicago, Mr. Kohn graduated from Northwestern University with a B.S. degree in business administration and attended the University of Arizona Law School.

Mr. Kohn enlisted in the U.S. Army Air Corps in 1941. He was selected to attend Officer's Candidate School and graduated as a second lieutenant at Harvard Business School. After the war, he became chairman of the board and C.E.O. of Mercantile Financial Corporation in Chicago, a company started by his father in 1917. He purchased a vacation home in Pebble Beach in 1965 and moved here permanently in 1980.

An avid golfer, Mr. Kohn was a member of Quail Lodge and Country Club in Carmel Valley as well as the Briarwood Country Club in Deerfield, Ill. In 1972 he played in the Crosby Pro-Am (now the AT&T) as an amateur.

He served on the boards of Shelter Outreach Plus, the Food Bank for Monterey County, SCORE, California Coastal Rural Development Corp., SIRS (Sons in Retirement), Congregation Beth Israel and the Carmel Foundation.

Additionally, he was a charter member of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, Anti-Defamation League (B'nai B'rith), the Simon Wiesenthal Museum of Tolerance and was a Hadassah Associate.

Mr. Kohn is survived by his wife of 60 years, Adeline of Pebble Beach; sons Richard of Chicago, Lawrence and Robert, both of Los Angeles; and four grandchildren.

Donations may be made to Shelter Outreach Plus, Congregation Beth Israel, Monterey/Salinas Chapter of Hadassah or the donor's favorite charity.

A memorial service for JAMES CHARLES KANE of Carmel Valley will begin at 4 p.m. Saturday, April 27 at Carmel Valley Ranch. Mr. Kane died April 22 in Carmel Valley.

He joined the family business, Parisian Bakeries, but later moved to Carmel Valley. He enjoyed water skiing, snowboarding and riding his motorcycle but his greatest passion was his love for his children.

He was preceded in death by his mother, Maidie Oppenheimer Kane and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Oppenheimer, who were longtime owners of the historic Rancho San Carlos in Carmel Valley.

Donations in Mr. Kane's memory may be made to the Tularcitos School Auditorium Fund, 35 Ford Road, Carmel Valley, CA 93924; or Carmel Middle School Fund, P.O. Box 222740, Carmel, CA 93922.

Free books to fourth graders bring California history to life

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IT HAS been a book that has almost been loved to death by fourth grade students and their parents, drawn into the web of fascinating historical facts of Monterey and its environs.

"More Than Memories — History and Happenings of the Monterey Peninsula" written by Randall A. Reinstedt of Pacific Grove — a former fourth grade teacher — turned-author and publisher — has been used in local schools for 17 years as a supplement to more traditional California history books.

Originally published with a print-run of 2,000 in 1985 under the auspices of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce Foundation and supported by many local persons and organizations, "More Than Memories" became an instant success when distributed free of charge, 30 copies per class, to every fourth grade classroom in Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel school districts — and to all local private schools.

Now, 5,000 updated and expanded "More Than Memories" have been printed for school distribution to all fourth grade classes throughout the Monterey Peninsula — still free of charge.

The mayor and city council of Monterey kicked off the financial campaign with a contribution of $10,000. The Leon and Sylvia Panetta Institute for Public Policy stepped in with a grant of more than $55,000 from the Robert and Virginia Stanton Endowment, a fund of the Community Foundation for Monterey County with a special interest in children and historic preservation. It was the Panetta Institute that set a goal of printing 5,000 copies and distributing them to all elementary schools in the Monterey Peninsula and greater Salinas areas and to libraries. Monterey Mayor Dan Albert bought 1,000 books for the City of Monterey to give to VIPS.

Randall Reinstedt

"I've spent the best part of my life doing this," he told The Pine Cone. Born with a writer's curiosity, Reinstedt began collecting facts about the area when he was a kid with a paper route. When he spoke to old timers on collection day, they regaled him with tales of the past. "Did you know. . .?" they would begin, and Reinstedt absorbed it all.

He loved teaching and catching students on fire with the lore of the state, but most particularly, of the Monterey Peninsula, a rich source of California history. Family projects and activities are suggested at the end of each chapter, and parents have come to Reinstedt over the years, thanking him for bringing their families together in quality time.

The text is lavishly illustrated with sketches and black and white photographs. Many of the drawings were contributed by such local artists as Eldon Dedini, Hank Ketcham, Miguel Dominguez, Gus Arriola, Thornton Harby, Tony Hrusa and many others.

Reinstedt can be reached at Ghost Town Publications, (831) 624-9058.

"A good pair of running shoes, and anybody can do it," he said.

Chip Rerig

'Two or More of One Sex'

After driving up and down Highway 1 with friends and family, ever in awe of the landscape, Carmel Senior Planner Chip Rerig decided he'd like to spend some time in that scenery.

"My friends and I have thought for years, 'Wouldn't it be fun to run in the relay, across Bixby with no car?'" Rerig said. "So we signed up."

The five friends formed a Big Sur International Marathon relay team, which Rerig promptly named 'Two or More of One Sex' because it meets that coed team requirement with two men — Rerig and Monterey civil engineer Chris Stout — and three women: Kristin Schneider, Shannon Craig and Nicole Speel.

Being well acquainted with the development pressures on the coast, Rerig appreciates the spectacular, relatively untouched coastline that gives the tough marathon its world-class status.

"From a professional planner's perspective, people have done a really good job of respecting what amounts to a wonderful community resource," he said.

Rerig admitted running is not his favorite way to get exercise and that going solo can get a bit boring, but said he's more thrilled every day by the prospect of participating in the Big Sur International Marathon with thousands of others.

"I'm really, really excited at this point — I am ready for it to happen — and whenever I think about it, I smile." he said. "There are a few people who want to run really good times, and I want to keep sub-seven-minute miles, but I also want to stop and look out a little bit, look out at the ocean."

Tax dollars aren't free

WHAT IS a "grant"?

The word pops up all the time in meetings of local city councils, planning commissions, park districts, etc., etc. When they want to do something they don't think they can afford within the limits of their own budget, local officials usually try to get a "grant" — a term they use as a synonym for "gift"or perhaps "lottery winnings" — in other words, money that can be spent happily or even frivolously.

Sometimes, they're right. A grant can be a gift, but usually it's not. The difference is very important as local officials debate whether to apply for and spend those wonderful things called "grants."

A grant is a gift — something given at no cost to the recipient — when it comes from a private foundation designed to promote the causes favored by the foundation's benefactor. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, for example, gives millions in grants every year to promote population control, conservation and education, all in accordance with the wishes of Gates, the world's richest man, who has decided to give away a large portion of his billions.

But most grants you hear discussed at city hall are sent from one branch of government to another. They are definitely not gifts. They are an allocation of tax dollars which are, of course, collected from people who have incomes. They have no choice but to pay and when they send their money to the government — federal, state or local — they expect it to be spent wisely.

Too often, local government officials speak of a grant from the federal or state government as if it fell from heaven. Television and newspaper reports almost always refer to a federal grant with studied casualness, never mentioning that the money gleefully received at city hall or the county courthouse in the form of government grants comes from the very taxpayers whose interests the journalists should be guarding.

The more distant the source of the grant, in fact, the less local officials and reporters seem to worry about who is really paying for it.

The subject is relevant because of the Carmel City Council's discussion of the money received from the California Coastal Conservancy to install a set of stone stairs in replacement of the wooden ones at the foot of 12th Avenue. The coastal conservancy is a state agency. Its funding comes from California taxpayers. The $165,000 granted by the coastal conservancy to Carmel is not play money the city should spend just because it's there.

At the city council last week, at least one council member argued that the city should jump in and pay its matching share of the cost of improving the stairs to avoid returning the grant money to the state. By saying so, she sent the message that the project wasn't worth $340,000 if Carmel taxpayers had to foot the entire bill . . . but, somehow, when half the money comes from state taxpayers, it's suddenly worth doing.

This is not sensible. Taxpayer dollars — from whatever source — should not be spent on unneeded projects. If Carmel doesn't want to spend its own citizen's money on a project, neither should it fritter away other taxes on it. The money comes from the same place.

Sign critic should 'think carefully'

Dear Editor:

Critic of political signs Erling Lagerholm may not know that those displays are a time-honored feature of the American campaign process.

The reason such signs are legal, he will be glad to note, is that they fill an important role in the democratic system. Candidates have so little time to establish their identity with the electorate that signs can help, if the runner for office chooses.

If someone finds something distasteful about a sign — a red, white and blue one — he can take comfort in that they are there only for a little while.

It's like the ads crowding the newspapers extolling the candidates — and deservedly so, since they selflessly give their time and talent to seeking to serve the public. The ads like the signs appear and then are seen no more, until the next election.

Citizen Lagerholm should think carefully about the example he sets when he boasts about sneaking a political sign away in the night. He may think it is cute, but it's criminal.

Howard Skidmore, Carmel

Hatchet job?

Dear Editor:

I see the Pine Cone has devoted yet another full editorial to a hatchet job on Enid Sales and her strongly held views on historical preservation.

Your past attempts to discredit Sales have been mean-spirited and petty, but now to characterize her as "contemptuous of the democratic process" is going too far. The right to express one's opinion is at the very core of the democratic process. To belittle Sales for doing so is the real threat to democracy.

Enid Sales is a nationally respected expert on historic preservation and rehabilitation. Her courageous battle to save the Victorians in the Western Addition of San Francisco 30 years ago was highly controversial, but has left this city with a now trea-

The city of Carmel-by-the-Sea is fortunate to have a knowledgeable and articulate advocate such as Sales. And, as every citizen in a democracy, she has the right and responsibility to utilize legal and governmental channels, such as the Coastal Commission, in the pursuit of her goals.

Stupid Parking or Parking Stupid?

Dear Editor:

To: Carmel Business Proprietors and Managers

Parking has always been an issue in the business district of our lovely little town of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Well, I have a degree in Parkeology and have made some serious observations, hypotheses and conclusions.

If you are trying to maximize sales opportunities for your business, consider the following:

Are all six or eight of your employees parking their cars, vans and RVs on the street in front of the doors of your business and your neighbor's businesses?

Are you and your employees spending more time monitoring chalk marks, playing the "Cat and Mouse" game with the Carmel Parking Enforcement Commandos than actually being on the job?

Are you spending more money on parking tickets than late charges on your credit card bills?

How do you expect potential buyers to park anywhere near our businesses when all the parking spaces are monopolized by "Stupid Parkers" all day?

Notice I used the word "business" instead of "gallery" so I am not being too specific to the perpetrators.

Befuddled regards,
Russell Bieman

Pebble Beach lease

Dear Editor:

After seventeen years in business at The Lodge, the Coast Gallery Pebble Beach lease will not be renewed.

We wish to take this opportunity to express our gratitude to the Pebble Beach Company for the privilege of owning and operating a gallery at the Lodge since 1986.

The Pebble Beach Company could not have been a better, more equitable landlord; the rent has been fair and the treatment first class.

We value our long-term association with the Pebble Beach Company and appreciate the opportunity to have operated a world-class gallery in such a world-class resort.

We have enjoyed conducting our business in Pebble Beach and are confident that the tens of thousands of visitors who have passed through our gallery will continue to have a memorable experience at the Lodge.

We wish the Pebble Beach Resorts and Shops continued success in the future.

now of Carmel. Trivers also sent a package to former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, with a note saying he wanted Eastwood to be the first "consumer in America to taste our newest cookie named 'Carmel.'"

Eastwood, who is wrapping up shooting on his latest movie, "Blood Work," hasn't said whether he actually ate a cookie or whether he liked it. But, because he's an owner of the P.B. Co., the trademark infringement may leave a bad taste in Eastwood's mouth.

The cookies, the latest in a long line of successful, upscale yummies sold by Pepperidge Farm, are available at Bruno's and Nielsen Bros. Carmelites may want to hurry to buy a package, not only for the cookies and the souvenir value of the Lone Cypress drawing, but to savor the turgid copy on the package dedicated to their beloved hometown:

"Carmel . . . a picturesque seaside community where golden sunsets meet with rugged, rocky coastline. The perfect name for a golden cookie loaded with chunks of creamy milk chocolate and chewy caramel. Sink your teeth into the big, satisfying taste and you'll know why we call it the World's Best Chocolate Chunk Cookie."

The Carmel Cookie Director at Pepperidge Farm, who did not wish to be identified, told The Pine Cone that the company researches famous vacation destinations with special charm as cookie-name candidates. Already in the line are Sedona, Tahoe, Sausalito, Nantucket, Santa Cruz, Chesapeake, Montauk and, of course, the best-selling Milano.

Why a drawing of the Lone Cypress on the back of the package? "Because it's such an icon of Carmel," the cookie director said, unaware, until so informed, that it is an icon of Pebble Beach and the Pebble Beach Co.

"Carmel Legends"

Another good way to decide where you want to retire is to study the obituary pages of a town's local newspaper. For example, a four week appraisal of The Carmel Pine Cone shows that 8 people died at 78, 3 at 82, 2 at 87, 2 at 89 and 9 over 90. A very respectable showing and one worthy of thoughtful consider-ation. Another salient fact is that there is a small tract in Carmel zoned as a cemetery. It's at the corner of 8th and Dolores and is now occupied by the Red Cross and American Legion buildings. Not one body is buried there! In almost 100 years of its history, Carmel has never found reason to activate its cemetery. Of course there are a couple of sarcophagi at the Mission, though it has never been established that Father Serra is entombed there. And there are a number of memorial windows, plaques, benches and bird baths scattered about the town. All in all, one may conclude that death is a stranger in Carmel, and this is a great place to retire.

Historicity of 3-foot mission may land in council's lap

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A TINY old model of the Carmel Mission isn't an historic building, the planning commission decided April 10. And rather than redo his plans — which could no longer take advantage of exceptions allowed when working on historic properties — owner Bill Wilson asked the commission to go ahead and deny his project rather than delay its decision. He said he plans to appeal the vote to the city council.

Taking the opposite view of the city's historic preservation committee, the Carmel Planning Commission unanimously ruled that even if it were historic, the cement model of the Carmel Mission created by private school children in 1912 could not be used to justify variances for other buildings on the same lot.

"I think the idea of this toy being designated historic to such an extent as to bring historic preservation rules to the entire property is such a stretch," commissioner Pope Coleman said.

Three months ago, the city's planning staff had recommended Wilson be allowed to designate the miniature mission model as historic and take advantage of related incentives to restore what is said to be Carmel's first private schoolhouse and build a new home alongside it.

Since the schoolhouse itself has been altered too much to qualify as an historic building, the committee unanimously agreed in January that putting the mission model on the city's historic register would be worth it to see the schoolhouse restored.

Wilson has completed five projects in Carmel and has yet to tear down an old building, but said he's already spent almost $100,000 on this project and might end up taking down the schoolhouse in order to build the home he wants.

"I have a history of restoring and I think I have done good job," he told the commission. "But I think I'm put in the position where I have to go against what I believe in."

Several commissioners wondered how the schoolhouse could not be historic, but

Federal oak death rules may cost county plenty

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE $36,000 Monterey County received to enforce California regulations to stop the spread of sudden oak death will be just a drop in the bucket now that much more stringent regulations have been put in place by the federal government.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors unanimously voted to accept the $36,000 and enforce the statewide regulations, which were adopted by the California Department of food and Agriculture last summer.

However, those regulations are on hold now that the United States Department of Agriculture has instituted tougher restrictions on shipping oak products, said Ken Corbishley, chief deputy agricultural commissioner for Monterey County.

"We can't be less stringent than the federal regulations," Corbishley explained.

When it went into effect Feb. 14, the USDA's quarantine prohibited counties with even just one infected tree from shipping oaks and its related species outside the county.

By contrast, the CDFA's regulations had prohibited the shipment of oaks within a one-quarter-mile radius of infected trees.

The new regulation "was quite difficult on many shippers in Monterey County, where we know our infested area is basically the Big Sur coastal area, but the federal guidelines are affecting what's being done in Salinas and King City," Corbishley said.

Since issuing the regulations in February, the federal government has loosened its restrictions to allow growers in infected counties to ship as long as each county inspects the premises every 30 days.

Expensive lab and field tests

Corbishley explained that the inspections are a labor-intensive process that include examining all plants considered hosts of the disease and sending samples to state laboratories to be analyzed.

If the samples test negative for the presence of the fungus Phytophthora ramorum, the county's agricultural commissioner's office can issue a certificate that's good for 30 days.

The new regulations have already put a strain on Monterey County and the nine other California counties which have been required to carry them out.

"The regulations went into effect the day they were published, which really left us and several other counties with this fungus scrambling to address the shipping requirements," Corbishley said.

Since then, the USDA has backed off a little on the regulations based on local feedback. But it remains to be seen what the final version of the federal rules will be. After accepting public comments on its regulations this month, the USDA may change its mind once again.

It's quite possible that "all those concessions they made for us could be turned around," Corbishley said.

And even if the regulations remain exactly as they are now, the Monterey County Agricultural Commissioner will undoubtedly have to hire new employees and find more funding to keep up with the rigorous procedures.

As is often the case, the new regulations instituted by the federal government didn't come with money to enforce them.

County officials are still waiting to find out if some proposed federal legislation — including a bill sponsored by California Senator Barbara Boxer to provide as much as $70 million to fight sudden oak death — will come through for California.

senior planner Chip Rerig explained it has been rebuilt.

"Unfortunately we don't have any plans indicating what the original building looked like," he said, adding that the door and windows have changed and a fireplace was added.

"So it's not what schoolchildren attended school in at the turn of the 1900s."

Rerig recommended the commission postpone its decision on Wilson's proposal and require him and his architect, Jim McCord, to redesign the new home and schoolhouse remodel without asking for variances in volume, height and floor area.

McCord's design calls for 45 additional square feet of floor area, a height increase of 18 inches and an additional 4,000 cubic feet of volume. He planned to make the renovated schoolhouse and Carmel Mission model visible to passersby on the street.

Saying the design seemed so close to being acceptable, Coleman pushed for a continuance.

"If he can make the little schoolhouse as he described it to us, it would be a plus," he said. "A little creativity will pull this on through."

But McCord and Wilson requested the commission go ahead and reject their application so they could appeal the decision to the city council.

"If the continuance is for us to work with staff . . to move forward the way it is with some reasonable changes to the residence that would not require removing basic functions," he would agree, McCord said.

"But if we have to go back and hack the residence to meet the requirements, there would be no incentive — we wouldn't be getting anything for the benefits of preserving the schoolhouse."

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject secured his rat terrier dog to a sign post outside the post office while he mailed several items at the counter. While he was inside, several passersby noticed the dog had managed to loosen his leash and was endangering himself by standing behind vehicles parking at the curb. Caller could not locate the owner and thought the dog had been inadvertently left at that location. He took the animal home and called the number on the dog collar and told the owner he would meet him at the post office to return the animal. The exchange was made and neither party wanted any further police action. It was apparent the caller had the best interest of the animal in mind and had no intention to keep the rat terrier.
